MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIR

Eleven years have gone by since the World March of Women Committee began working to have a law passed to correct salary imbalances in New Brunswick. Today, a law covering public sector employees is working its way into reality.

For the Coalition, this is a major accomplishment, and we are thankful that the government is at last recognizing the existence of wage discrimination among its employees in such a public way. We will continue to follow the progress of this law and its implementation, in order to make sure that this legislation does what it needs to do, and goes as far as it needs to go.

Moreover, we are committed to pursuing our efforts to ensure the government finishes the work it has begun, and passes the law that we have worked so hard to bring into existence: an act that will cover the private sector as well as the public sector. A law that only applies to the public sector ignores thousands of women who will have to endure economic hardships resulting from the wage gap for many years to come. It is for these women that we are inviting you to take up your walking stick once more and begin your pilgrim's march towards our original objective, to make the wage adjustments necessary to put an end to the unfair and undignified situation in which women and men currently find themselves.

I would be remiss if I didn't acknowledge the countless hours of volunteer work you have generously offered already to carry our objective to term. I would like to express my sincere thanks to all of you, as well as my hope that your solidarity to this cause, to which you have so enthusiastically committed yourselves for so long, will remain strong.

None of us can or should ignore Johanne Perron's devoted efforts and her passion for this cause. We owe her much gratitude and appreciation for proudly carrying the flame forward.

As we are well aware, political changes that improve women's lives have historically been slow. Perhaps our elected officials need more than a decade to understand how important women's work is to the world. Without it, society would be much the poorer. We need to have the courage to believe that we will make this next step more quickly than the last one.

Huberte Gautreau
Chairperson

MESSAGE FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

I'm writing these words with a feeling of accomplishment. We will very shortly have pay equity legislation for the public sector, and we can celebrate the work we have done together, and above all a first victory! I feel privileged to have a job that allows me to support so many women and men in the search for greater equality and for respect for the right to pay equity.

The road hasn't been easy, and it may not be in future either. We cannot give up until we get pay equity legislation for the private sector! However, the idea of pay equity is making progress. Women and men in female-dominated jobs are already finding that their work is valued more highly and receiving wages that better reflect this. Our efforts have already begun to have a real impact in the lives of our fellow citizens!

At the same time as it promotes legislation, the Coalition is continuing to inform people and to offer tools to obtain pay equity in various workplaces. Our play On travaille pas pour des pinottes has already been performed before almost 800 high school students! A teacher's guide is given to their teachers to increase awareness. We gave a "new look" to our Internet site and our communication tools in order to better reach young people who want to learn more about pay equity. We also prepared documentation and organized workshops to equip persons working in traditionally female trades and professions in the public and private sectors. Again, our Internet site complements our work.

Thanks to our committees, volunteerism is a cornerstone of the Coalition, compensating for the loss of funding for women's advocacy activities. Supported by our communication and strategy committees, our regional committees have surpassed themselves this year. A brand new committee has even been set up in Saint John. And it didn't waste any time before acting, either! Together, the regional committees ensure our presence all over the province. And what great work they have done in raising awareness among not only their fellow citizens but also political decision-makers to obtain good pay equity legislation! The bill as presented may not met all of our expectations, but it promises to be a good tool to correct pay inequity in the public sector.

I am happy that it was introduced while Huberte Gautreau, who has devoted years to pay equity, was president. Her vision has guided us tirelessly! And I am sure it will continue to do so!!!

Let's celebrate! Then let's get back to work on the next step: legislation for everyone!

Johanne Perron
Executive Director

The Coalition is, first and foremost, a forum for engagement for social change. Many people dedicate hours of their time as volunteers. We would like to express our sincere thanks to all those who serve on our Board of Directors, our standing committees and our regional committees, as well as all our members who have contributed to lobbying efforts for pay equity legislation. GOVERNANCE AND STRATEGIC PLANNING

The strategic goals of the Coalition, from now until 2010, are to:

- increase understanding of pay equity and the ways to achieve it,
- develop our support base and exert more pressure in order for pay equity legislation to be passed,
- improve our organizational capacity,
- work towards passing a law for the public and private sectors that meets our objectives and criteria.

In order to follow the principles of strategic governance, the Board of Directors of the Coalition reviewed the way the organization functioned, and decided to create four management committees, some of which are already working:

- By-laws and Constitution Committee
- Nominating Committee
- Executive Director Evaluation Committee
- Risk Management Committee

AWARENESS ACTIVITIES

Theatre

Since the last AGM, the Moncton Sable theatre company presented a play, "On travaille pas pour des pinottes" (We won't work for peanuts) at École Sainte-Anne, in Fredericton, École Grande-Rivière, in Saint-Léonard, and the École régionale de Baie-Sainte-Anne. Approximately 790 young people had the opportunity to become more aware of the need for pay equity.

Moncton Sable worked in partnership with the Coalition to create this play. Directed by Louise Lemieux, three young actresses—Janie Mallet, Annik Landry and Annie Laplante— are people who live in the colourful world of "perroquettes" in a situation of unfair pay. The play is primarily directed towards young audiences of high-school, college and university age.

Workshops and Other Activities

The Coalition has made a commitment to Status of Women Canada to offer information and suggest concrete methods to empower women in female-dominated job categories to take charge of pay equity initiatives.

Offering workshops is one of the ways of reaching this goal. During the past year, staff members and members of the Coalition reviewed existing material, consulted experts in the pay equity field, and took part in a conference organized by the Ontario Pay Equity Commission in November 2008. Afterwards, the Coalition developed a workshop format and a manual that can be given to people who work in female-dominated job categories, enabling them to understand pay equity and evaluate job classes. The tools were tested in two workshops held in November 2008. Feedback was positive, and arrangements have been made to offer workshops in French and in English throughout the province.

The Coalition also offered workshops geared to specific groups, encouraging action on pay equity issues. After consulting key stakeholders, a workshop was offered to a group of twelve directors of not-for-profit organizations in the Greater Moncton Area, on March 20, 2009. Two other workshops were organized with union representatives on April 21 and April 27, 2009, to set out principles to be respected in applying pay equity to New Brunswick public sector employees.

Our experiences with these workshops have made the Coalition think about other workshops that could be tailored to meet the needs of specific groups and settings.

Talks, Presentations, and Displays

In 2008-2009, the Coalition continued its work in promoting awareness of pay equity among New Brunswickers, and particularly among the young people of the province. Members and staff members of the Coalition gave no fewer than 34 presentations, speaking to more than 1200 people of whom about 35% were under 35 years of age; this represented 8 more presentations and about 100 more people than the previous year. Last May, the Coalition invited a very inspiring speaker: Michelle Dagnino, from the Equal Pay Coalition. She described the struggle for pay equity in Ontario. Afterwards, Norma Dubé, Assistant Deputy Minister responsible for Women's Issues on the Executive Council level, provided an update on the progress made by the government of New Brunswick. The Coalition also provided information by having its stand at a number of events held in the province last year.

We would like to thank the volunteers who gave presentations. They are: Huberte Gautreau, Denise Savoie, Roberte Léger, Elizabeth Blaney, Madeleine Delaney-LeBlanc, Sandy Harquail, Gail Taylor, Carmen Gill, Isabel Lanteigne and Rachel Arsenault.

COMMUNICATION ACTIVITIES

Communications Committee

Members : Andrée Cormier, Janice Gray, Danielle Savoie.

A communications committee works to support the executive director of an organization. This year, our Communications Committee continued to update communications tools used by the Coalition and to follow the 2008-2010 Communications Plan. The new promotional flyer was distributed widely. Thanks to the skills and the financial contribution of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, the Coalition now has a banner stand for its display, giving it a more attractive and professional look. Similarly, the committee redesigned its Web image and continued to modify the content of the Web site to make it more dynamic.

Media Communications

The Coalition issued eight press releases and two letters to the editor. It also joined other organizations to form a Coalition for Fair Taxes, which is mandated to raise awareness of issues related to tax policy. Along with other provincial and national women's organizations, the Coalition drew attention to the impact of budget and economic decisions made by the different levels of government on women. Over the 2008-09 fiscal year, the subject of pay equity or the Coalition for Pay Equity itself were mentioned at least 185 times in the media, compared to 175 times the previous year.

Internet Communications

Our Web site was completely redesigned in order to offer people looking for tools to promote pay equity more of what they're looking for, and to reach more young people. Knowing that electronic networking is valued by young women, another innovation was opening a Twitter account for those who want to follow us more regularly.

Member Communications

Keeping our members up to date on current issues has always been of primary interest. We have sent our press releases by e-mail and copies of articles of interest to our members on a regular basis. During the 2008-09 fiscal year, we also published a newsletter.

POLITICAL STRATEGY AND ACTION

Strategy Committee

Members: Chantal Abord-Hugon, Madeleine Delaney-Leblanc, Huberte Gautreau, Marcelle Mersereau, Lise Rodrigue.

The Strategy Committee continued to steer the Coalition's involvement in political action. In 2008-2009, the committee's emphasis was on strategic consultations to move pay equity forward at the provincial level.

Provincial Government

Follow-Up on the Charter for Change

Many of our volunteers met their MLAs to remind the provincial government of its campaign promises for pay equity in the New Brunswick government's Charter for Change, and for the application of sound, good faith principles to pay equity.

The determination of these members accomplished a great deal. Here is an update of our progress on each one of the promises, at the time of writing:

➤ Ensure that the Pay Equity Act applies to all parts of the public service.

The Minister responsible for the Status of Women, Mary Schryer, tabled a law on pay equity in the public sector on May 29, 2009. The law respects a number of our recommendations, but other amendments would make it more effective.

➤ Establish clear and measurable benchmarks and targets for the achievement of pay equity supported by yearly progress updates.

Private Sector: Without a law, the government has no authority to monitor the level of pay equity in the private sector on the ground. It needs to rely on surveys. According to the Progress Report on New Brunswick's Five Year Wage Gap Action Plan, published in Spring 2008, "Results from the 2008 Employer Survey found that of the 5,501 New Brunswick employers who responded, 24.9 per cent have a written, formal gender-neutral process of evaluating jobs done by women and men based on things such as skill level, effort, responsibility and working conditions, to make sure that jobs of equal value earn equal pay."

Public Sector: The Liberal government, like the previous one, has stated their intention to abolish unfair wage gaps in the public sector in 2010. In reality, the law sets out a later date.

➤ Bring together all stakeholders to further address issues raised at recent public hearings with the goal of extending pay equity to the private sector through legislation.

We have not been told what the government intends to do in the future, but no new initiatives have been undertaken this year.

➤ Establish the government as a model employer by starting job evaluations to extend pay equity to workers providing contracted service to the government.

The results of efforts to bring pay equity into effect for daycare workers, home service workers, and the staff of residences for women who are victims of spousal violence remain uncertain. Although some salaries have increased slightly, the amounts of pay equity adjustments have not yet been determined.

Three municipalities in New Brunswick (Memramcook, Tracadie-Sheila and Quispamsis) have begun (and in the case of Memramcook, completed) a pay equity program, with the help of the provincial government.

Tax Reform and the Provincial Budget

In July 2008, the Coalition submitted a brief entitled "What About Women?" to the Special Committee on New Brunswick's Tax System. This paper presented a gender analysis comparing the impact of changes proposed in the Discussion Paper on New Brunswick's Tax System according to gender. The Coalition explained that it was particularly concerned about the impact of income tax reductions on women's lives, through the resulting cuts in services. In addition, a flat rate tax system, accompanied by an increase in consumer taxes, favours individuals with higher incomes. In a context where unfair wage gaps exist and where various conditions keep women's salaries lower than men's, women stand to lose even more. In 2005, women working full-time all year in New Brunswick earned an average of 73% of men's average earnings, or an average of $32,000 compared to $43,700 for men.¹

The Coalition worked with various women's groups throughout the province and signed a declaration on women and the economy, released at a press conference on February 4, 2009. Essentially, what these women's groups were asking for was a gender analysis of the government's economic stimulus package.

Indeed, any economic stimulus plan needs to take into account the different between women's and men's economic situations. For one thing, since women are concentrated in the helping professions and in services, cuts in the public sector have a disproportionate effect on women, while jobs in construction tend to favour male-dominated job classes.

Demands presented by women's groups were clustered around three main themes:

- investment in the social infrastructure, i.e. social programs such as daycare, housing, education and health care,
- adequate income for all women and men, including equitable wages,
- an income tax system that would maintain and increase taxes on companies and individuals and maintain tax rates in effect at that time.

The Coalition, in collaboration with the New Brunswick Childcare Coalition, the Moncton and District Labour Council, and the Regroupement féministe du Nouveau-Brunswick, invited the Minister of Finance, Victor Boudreau, to give a speech on the theme of "Women and the Economy" at a brunch in Dieppe, as part of International Women's Day activities.

Poverty Reduction Plan

¹ N.B. Advisory Council on the Status of Women, Report Card 2008 on the Status of Women in New Brunswick, p. 49.

Several members of the Coalition took part in regional consultations on poverty reduction organized by the Minister of Social Development, Mary Schryer. Our members explained the link between women's poverty and salary discrimination, as well as the importance of a gender analysis of government policy. The Coalition also joined several groups, under the leadership of the Common Front for Social Justice, to endorse the document Working Together to Reduce Poverty in the Province of New Brunswick. Organizations who signed this document urged the government to adopt an approach founded on the principles of social justice and gender analysis, and, among other recommendations, to pass a law on pay equity.

Principles of a Law on Pay Equity

After the government announced it would be passing a law on pay equity for the public sector in the Throne Speech, in November 2008, the Coalition set out the principles it wished to see respected in pay equity legislation. Louise Aucoin and Michèle Caron, who are Law professors, helped write the document. The principles were revised and approved in February, at a workshop with representatives from the public sector and the Coalition. The principles were then distributed to all MLAs and all the leaders of all political parties in the province. A campaign led to meetings with 22 MLAs, the Progressive Conservative caucus (on its invitation) and the leader of the New Democratic Party. This action was interrupted as soon as the Pay Equity Bill was introduced at the Legislative Assembly.

Work with the Community Non-Profit Organizations Secretariat

Three people participated in regional conferences organized by the Community Non-Profit Organizations Secretariat, in Moncton and in Edmundston. They addressed their concerns with the low salaries prevalent in the not-for-profit sector, as well as the importance of supporting community organizations working for social justice in their goal of fostering active citizenship in a democratic society.

On April 27, 2009, the Chair and the Executive Director of the Coalition met the Executive Director of the Secretariat to discuss some of the options for examining wages in the community sector.

Federal Government

Pay Equity

The Federal government passed a law that weakened pay equity. The Public Sector Equitable Compensation Act, enshrined in the Budget Implementation Act, goes against the recommendations of the Pay Equity Working Group tabled in 2004 par le Groupe de travail sur l'équité salariale, en 2004.

Instead of ensuring that female-dominated and male-dominated job classes would be remunerated on the basis of equal pay for work of equal value, the Public Sector Equitable Compensation Act makes pay equity subject to collective bargaining and market forces. This legislation goes as far as to impose fines of up to $50,000 on unions that "dare" to encourage one of its members to make a pay equity complaint.

The Coalition for Pay Equity, like many others who support pay equity, continue to promote the recommendations of the Pay Equity Task Force.

Funding of Women's Rights Organizations

Status of Women has still not restored funding to lobbying and research activities. Following protests against this decision, the government increased the budget of the Women's Funding Program, but only for activities closer to the area of services rather than systemic change.

Although the Coalition obtained funding from the government for its public awareness activities and for developing materials for promoting pay equity, it continues to ask the government to rethink the program.

Fortunately, thanks to our volunteers and partners as well as other sources of funding, the Coalition was able to carry out some of its lobbying efforts. On the other hand, the climate of political instability has translated into insecurity about future funding for women's organizations, even with the new criteria.

Federal Contribution to Poverty Reduction in Canada

Standing Committee on Human Resources, Skills and Social Development and the Status of Persons with Disabilities (HUMA) conducted a study on the federal contribution to poverty reduction in Canada. Through the work of Lee Chalmers and Gail Taylor, the Coalition made a presentation to the committee's hearings in Moncton, on May 12, 2009. The Coalition emphasized that pay equity legislation would be a partial solution to women's poverty. The Coalition also reminded the committee of the major recommendations made in 2004 by the Federal Pay Equity Task Force.

OUR PARTNERS

New Brunswick Federation of Labour (NBFL)

The NBFL has frequently brought pay equity to the table, keeping it on the radar of labour relations. The Joint NBFL / Coalition committee continues to maintain the link between the Coalition for Pay Equity and unions in the NBFL, developing common strategies for progress in the area of pay equity and for promoting the adoption of pay equity legislation for the public and private sectors. This year, the committee considered the principles upon which the provincial law announced in the Throne Speech should be based. The committee is composed of representatives of the New Brunswick Union of Public and Private Employees (Susie Proulx-Daigle), the Canadian Union of Public Employees, New Brunswick (Raymond Léger), the Public Service Alliance of Canada (Monique Plante, Anna Goguen), the Canadian Labour Congress (Dee-dee Daigle) and the Coalition for Pay Equity (Huberte Gautreau and Johanne Perron).

New Brunswick Advisory Council on the Status of Women (NBACSW)

The New Brunswick Advisory Council on the Status of Women shows constant support for the Coalition's activities, and distributes information about our activities and about pay equity issues through its electronic newsletter, "NB Women's News" / « NouVELLES ».

New Brunswick Childcare Coalition

The New Brunswick Childcare Coalition supports pay equity for daycare workers, and is mindful of the link between wages and the quality of childcare services. Pay equity and daycare issues are related in many ways, and both can make an important contribution to women's equality.

Regroupement féministe du Nouveau-Brunswick

The Coalition for Pay Equity supported the activities of the Regroupement féministe du Nouveau-Brunswick this year, for instance in emphasizing the importance of a gender analysis of government economic policies and in helping develop a global development plan for Francophone communities in New Brunswick.

Pay Equity Network

After the Public Sector Equitable Compensation Act was tabled in February 2009, several members of the Pay Equity Network, a national group, pressured the Federal government and the Senate to respect the right of Canadians to pay equity. Despite the failure of these efforts, the members of the Network continue to urge action on the recommendations presented in 2004 by the Federal Pay Equity Task Force. The Coalition joined the Network in 2004.

Femmes Équité Atlantique

Huberte Gautreau is the Coalition's representative to Femmes Équité Atlantique (FÉA). The aim of this group is to increase the ability of Acadian and Francophone women in the Atlantic provinces to influence policy decisions in the area of social and economic equity for women in minority settings. The FÉA helps Francophone women's groups throughout Atlantic Canada to connect with each other, develop working tools, and pool information about situations in their respective communities. This makes it possible for a group to share the results of a gender analysis in their own area, for instance, or for groups to work together to find ways to take action on problems related to the wage gaps. This year's accomplishments included publishing a flyer encouraging women to get involved in politics, organizing several events, including five provincial information sessions for girls and women in the four Atlantic provinces, a regional gathering for girls and young women in Atlantic Canada, and sending delegations to the 2008 "feminist university" at Laval and to the Canada-wide gathering of young feminists, Waves of Resistance / Toujours rebelles, as well as producing a resource guide for girls and young women which will soon be distributed throughout the province.

The Common Front for Social Justice

The Coalition for Pay Equity is a member of the Common Front for Social Justice and provides information and updates on pay equity issues to this group. Huberte Gautreau and Johanne Perron represented the Coalition this past year. In Fall 2008, the Common Front for Social Justice organized its second Summit on Poverty. Following its efforts on economic and social justice, the New Brunswick government announced that it would develop an action plan to eliminate poverty.

FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

The 2008-2009 financial statement was reviewed by Louise Belliveau, C.A. As of February 28th, 2009, the account balance was of $90,480 and the term deposits $38,500, of which around $124,083 represented the amount to be brought forward to the year 2009-2010.
